PREFACE.

CLASSMATES : —

The record of the class for the past three years is presented in the following report.

Certain members I can give no account of, and would ask any member knowing their occupation or address to send the same to me.

Once more I ask the attention of delinquent members to their subscription to the Class Fund. Members of the class, not graduates, are invited to subscribe to the fund, as several have already done.

In accordance with a vote of the class, the Class Cup was presented, through your Class Committee, to Harold Fitch Travis, son of George C. Travis.

The class has lost two members during the past three years, — Dudley Pickman Rogers, Henry Ware Deane. Fitting tributes to each, written by their nearest friends, are given in the report.

In accordance with the wishes of their friends no resolutions were adopted in either case, and I would advise the adoption, by the class, at the next meeting, of a vote, to the effect that notice of the death of classmates be taken only at the commencement meeting of the class next succeeding the date of such death.

Members of the class, not graduates, are again asked to renew and continue their connection with the class.

The many members who have kindly and promptly answered my inquiries I beg to thank sincerely; the almost equally many who have been tardy in their acknowledgments, I would ask in future to remember that slight forgetfulness from each one of so many causes much trouble to their Secretary. I would ask each member to notify me of any mistakes there may be in the following report, of any future changes in his address, and a short account of his progress each year.

THOS. P. BEAL,
Class Secretary.

CLASS OF 1869.

FRANCIS HENRY APPLETON.

Born in Boston, June 17, 1847.

Son of F. H. and Georgiana C. (Silsbee) Appleton.

In reply to circular, he says: "My occupation is agriculture in its various branches. I sailed from New York in the S. S. China of the Cunard line, March 26, 1873, for an agricultural trip to Vienna and its neighborhood; also to England, and left Liverpool for New York in the S. S. Java of same line, September 27, 1873.

"Since your last report was issued I have held the positions of Librarian and Curator of the Bussey Institution, which I was obliged to resign.

"By request, have written and compiled, while in Vienna, a report on agriculture for the Massachusetts Commissioners to the Exposition.

"The militia being truly a precautionary measure pro bono publico, I may say, under this head, for the sake of record, that I have continued to be, since your last report, an active member of the 1st corps of Cadets, M.V.M., holding warrants as Sergeant, 1st Sergeant, and Sergeant Major, which latter office I now hold.

"A member and Vice-President of the Essex County Poultry Association. Was requested to deliver the annual address before the Essex Agricultural Society in 1874, but declined."

Was married at First Church, Boston, June 2, 1874, to Fanny Tappan, daughter of Sewell and Elizabeth Rollins Tappan, all of Boston.

WILLIAM FOSTER APTHORP.

I then bought a 'Chemical Works,' near Worcester (Mass.), where I am now engaged in the manufacture of mordants for dyeing, and intend to extend very soon into the manufacture of dye-stuffs generally. Mr. Waldo Lincoln, class of 1870, is now with me as partner. I reside in Worcester."

HENRY WARE DEANE.

Born in Boston, December 1, 1847.

Son of William R. and Abby (Doggett) Deane.

Died April 7, 1875, at the Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston, of typhoid fever, after an illness of ten days.

From his account of his life in the class-book, it appears that in 1849 his father removed to Brookline, which continued to be his home until 1869, and it was at the Brookline High School that he fitted for college. The following is taken from his account of himself:—

"I have never regretted coming to college, and though much of my attention has had to be devoted to outside cares and anxieties, I feel that I have reaped great good, and a great deal of pleasure, from my college course, and leave it with a conviction that the time will be far distant when I shall lead so independent and happy a life.

"I have given the preference to chemistry, natural history, and the modern languages, those being most agreeable to me, and best calculated to fit me for the study of medicine.

"From my childhood it has been my wish to be a physician. This wish I have cherished until it has become my ambition, and I feel that my future happiness will depend, to a great extent, on my success in this calling.

"It has been my purpose to commence the study of my profession in the fall of 1869; but circumstances have combined to make this impossible, and I shall be obliged to teach two years. I feel that perhaps the time spent in teaching may not be utterly wasted, and may, perhaps, lay a stronger foundation for future study."

As a fitting tribute to the respect in which he was held by all his classmates, and to the love of those who knew him intimately, one of his truest and dearest friends has written:—

"Henry Ware Deane was born in Boston, Dec. 1, 1847, and died April 7, 1875, at the Massachusetts General Hospital, of typhoid fever, after an illness of ten days.

"Rest assured, classmates, that Deane never was or could have been aught else than a noble and determined man. His life was one of constant earnestness of purpose, never complaining or yielding; he met trials, bereavements, and disappointments, and bore all silently and with uninterrupted cheerfulness. He had many afflictions, some of such a nature as to make a person having less courage than he yield to melancholy or despair.

"During our college life Deane never was in any way obtrusive, nor at any time in his life would he allow his family or intimate friends to compliment him without expressing doubts that there existed cause for their commendation, which seemed to him exaggerated praise. Whenever he received special commendation or attention from those whom he could not speak as freely to as to his intimate friends he expressed great surprise at receiving it and the most hearty gratitude. He was not one of our highest scholars on the ranking scale of marks; but his intelligence, his regularity at college exercises, his devotion to studies which were kindred to his proposed profession, his upright character, geniality, and brilliancy when in the society of his friends, all caused him to be respected by us all, and affectionately beloved by those of the class who were fortunate enough to be his intimate friends.

"Early in his childhood he determined to study medicine, and to this end directed all his plans for life. No sooner had he left us on Commencement Day of 1869, than he began teaching; for four years he was an assistant of Mr. John P. Hopkinson, in his boys' school in Boston, acting as private tutor after school hours and during summer vacations.

"By his genial disposition, his clear understanding of the character and habits of his boys, by exercise of the strictest impartiality, and by careful study, he made himself a most successful instructor.

"The marks of respect and affection paid to him during his life and since his death, by the young men and boys whom he taught, and by parents asking for advice from him in regard to their sons, are valuable and touching evidence of his uncommon influence as an instructor, adviser, and friend.

"The result of four years' work as a teacher enabled him to direct his whole attention to the study of medicine; he began in the autumn of 1873, at the Harvard Medical School, and intended to study in Europe before beginning his practice.

"He could not allow anything to delay his medical studies; he tried to accomplish more than his physical strength would permit, and closed a career of manly constancy to his life-long purpose, tenderly cared for by his devoted sister; a few of his numerous friends being allowed the privilege of seeing him and showing him some attention during his last days on earth.

"Classmates, we must all appreciate what a value the memory of such a life as Deane's has to us in these days! What a loss his death has caused us, needing as we do the strengthening influence of manly, determined virtue and character! We all were certain of Deane; 'we always knew where to find him.'

"He abhorred insincerity in any form, and these words are written with the hope that no word here or elsewhere written or uttered in regard to him, may conflict with his high idea of truth, or seem to his friends formal, unfeeling or unjust eulogy."

JAMES ALBERT DODGE.

Born in Salem, Mass., March 27, 1848.

Son of Wm. M. and Margaret H. (Woodward) Dodge.

Taught school in Salem until June, 1873, when he went to Germany, spent a half year at the University of Berlin, a second half year at Heidelberg. Since September, 1874, has been in England. Now at Manchester, Eng. Has directed his attention chiefly to the study of Chemistry.

CHARLES NORMAN FAY.

Born in Burlington, Vt., August 13, 1848.

Son of Charles and Charlotte E. (Hopkins) Fay.

Has remained in the Banking and Insurance business, as stated in the last report, at Marquette, Mich. Appointed Cashier of Bank, November, 1874. Office as Deputy Collector U. S. Int. Rev. discontinued May 1, 1873.

ARTHUR IRVING FISKE.

Born in Holliston, Mass., August 19, 1848.

Son of Lovett and Alma R. (Greenhalgh) Fiske.

June, 1872-1873, Tutor of Greek at Harvard; June, 1873, resigned his tutorship, and was appointed Master in Greek in the Boston Public Latin School, which position he still holds.

AUSTEN GEORGE FOX.

Born in New York, September 7, 1849.

Son of George H. and Hannah C. (Austen) Fox.

Has continued the study and practice of law in New York.

January, 1872, was admitted to the bar of the Supreme Court State of N. Y. and January, 1875, to the District Court of the United States, Southern District of N. Y. Passed the summers of 1872 and 1874 in Europe. December, 1873 — April, 1874, spent in Florida.

WILLIAM HENRY FRENCH.

Born in Laconia, N. H., April 14, 1848.

Son of Henry J. and Judith C. (Tilton) French.

September, 1872, entered the medical department at Harvard, and studied there two sessions; July, 1874, appointed House Physician at the Boston City Hospital for one year. Hopes to receive degree of M. D. at the coming commencement.

WILLIAM GALLAGHER, JR.

Born in Boston, January 6, 1849.

Son of William and Emily (Collins) Gallagher.

Continued at the Congregational Theological Seminary, Chicago, until his graduation in April, 1874. December 1, 1874, ordained to the ministry and installed as Pastor of the First Congregational Church of Bloomington, Ill.

Was married October 21st, 1874, in Chicago, to Frances Harriet McCulloch, of that city, daughter of Carleton G. and Harriet McCulloch.

SYDNEY KENDALL GOLD.

Born in Washington, D. C., October 15, 1847.

Son of Daniel and Mary A. (Kendall) Gold.

He writes from Faribault, Minn.: "I have been studying political economy during the last three years under the tuition of the 'Grangers.'

"The result of my researches is that if 'H. G.' were alive, I think he would no longer advise young men, particularly with money to invest in business, to go West."

GUSTAVUS GOWARD.

Born in Boston, December 28, 1845.

Son of Watson and Mary (Adams) Goward.

He writes: "As I was too late to help you three years ago, I shall go back to graduation in this short autobiographical sketch.

"After the Harvard commencement of 1869, I sojourned in the West, and spent some little time in recreation. Having sufficiently recuperated, I turned my attention fully to the law, and located in an office in Chicago. I was so engaged when I was induced, by the opportunities presented, to go to Washington. This was in December, 1869. There I remained until May, 1870, becoming well versed in the ins and outs of political and social life at the capitol. My facilities were of the best description, and I employed them to the utmost.

"May 14, 1870, I sailed for Europe, where I remained until the great Chicago fire occurred. While abroad, I visited Great Britain and Ireland, Belgium, Germany, Italy, Switzerland and France, doing some of them twice, and what would be called pretty thoroughly. During this time, the Franco-German war, the Italian Revolution, and the Passion Plays, were the great events of which I was the observer. On my return to America, in November, 1871, I immediately proceeded to Chicago. The city was in no condition for me to remain, and I went to Washington. After a few weeks in Washington, I, in January, 1872, departed for Cambridge, where I entered the Law School.

"I had not been there more than five weeks when my father suddenly died, February 23, 1872, a victim of the Chicago fire. This sad and unfortunate event necessitated my dropping my law studies for the time, and my entering into the management of the estate, being the only heir. I returned to Chicago, and finished several buildings that were under process of erection, and replaced others destroyed. I also carried on some manufacturing interests for about six months, when I disposed of them.

"July, 1872, found me residing in Hyde Park or Kenwood, a suburb of Chicago, upon a place which I had the preceding month purchased. Here and in the city, I remained until February, 1873, when I went to Washington and other seaboard cities, on a combined pleasure and business trip. Back again in Chicago, I was engaged as before; and in the fall of 1873 entered largely into the business of mortgage loans, and such I have continued to this day.

"In August, 1873, I took another trip east. In January, 1874, was east again to Washington and seaboard cities. In July, 1874, was at the Saratoga races, when another Chicago fire called me back. Within the last year I have been going to and fro between here and New York pretty frequently, owing to lawsuits which I have brought.

"I still continue a bachelor, and happily have the death of no wife or children to record.

"In 1872, received the degree of Master of Arts in the regular course.

"Regarding the authorship of books, etc., I am silent for the present.

"In June, 1874, I got together the Harvard men, and we formed the Harvard Association of Chicago, of which I am the Secretary and Treasurer.

HENRY MARION HOWE.

Born in Boston, March 2d, 1848.

Son of Samuel G. and Julia (Ward) Howe.

He writes: "On Monday, November 18, 1872, I resigned the superintendency of the Joliet Iron and Steel Co.'s Bessemer Steel Works, and after a short tour through Missouri to the places of metallurgical and mining interest, resided at North Chicago Rolling Mills from November 24 till December 3. I then returned to Troy, remaining at the Bessemer Steel Works in that city until February 26, 1873, when I accepted a position as expert in steel and iron on the Erie Railway, residing in New York city until April 13, being most of the time directly connected with the office of the President of the road, P. H. Watson. On April 13, 1873, I took up my head-quarters at Elmira, New York, on the Erie Railway, the seat of the manufacture of most of the rails used on that road. Besides several minor reports on the physical properties and value of different varieties of iron and steel, I presented a very long and full report on "The manner and causes of failure of the various classes of rails on the Erie Railway." My salary on the Erie Railway was $2,500 per annum.

"On Saturday, August 16, I resigned my position on the Erie Railway to accept the superintendency of the entire works of the 'Blair Iron and Steel Co.,' at Pittsburgh, Penn., with a salary of $2,500 and $12,500 in the company's capital stock.

"On account of the depression in the iron business it became necessary for me to attend to much of the outside business of Blair Iron and Steel Company, among its customers in Pittsburgh and later in the East; for which latter purpose I took up my head-quarters in New York City, on July 6, 1874.

"The depression in the iron business continuing and increasing, made it necessary for this company to restrict its business considerably, and on November 1, 1874, I resigned my connection with it, there being no prospect of a revival in trade. Since then I have been at leisure and have been studying engineering. On Wednesday, February 24, 1875, I read a paper entitled 'Blast Furnace Economy. The Reduction of Carbonic Acid in Anthracite Furnaces,' before the American Institute of Mining Engineers, at New Haven, Conn., published in the ²Engineering and Mining Journal,' of April 17 and 24, 1875."

Was married at St. Paul's Church, Troy, New York, April 9, 1874, to Fannie Gay, daughter of Willard and Mary A. Gay, all of Troy.

JOHN ROGERS MASON.

Born in Bangor, Me., August 21, 1848.

Son of John and Caroline R. (Fairfield) Mason.

He writes: "I have resided in Boston since July 10, 1872, when I entered the law-office of Messrs. Morse, Stone and Greenough. I was admitted to the Suffolk bar, at Boston, June 2, 1873, on motion of Richard Stone, Jr., and commenced practice on my own account, November 1, 1873, at 53 Devonshire street, where I have since remained, and which is my present address.

"I have been Justice of the Peace in Penobscot County, Maine, and am Justice for Suffolk County, and Commissioner for Maine in this State, which I presume may be considered offices of trust, as I certainly have not discovered profit or honor in them."

GEORGE EDMANDS MERRILL.

Born in Charlestown, Mass., December 19, 1846.

Son of Nathan and Amelia G. (Edmunds) Merrill.

He writes: "In your last report my trip to Europe was mentioned. I returned from quite an extended tour the last of September, 1872. Was ordained as Pastor of the First Baptist Church, in Springfield, Mass., October 3, 1872, and I still hold the position.

"Have published two books for young people, one while in college; one appeared April 24, 1872, entitled, 'Battle Lost and Won.' D. Lothrop & Co., Boston."

Was married October 1, 1872, to Florence A. Whittemore, daughter of Geo. W. and Synia H. Whittemore, all of Cambridge, Mass. August 11, 1874, a daughter, Elinor, was born.

ROYAL WHITMAN MERRILL.

Born in Bloomfield, Conn., November 17, 1849.

Son of Horatio and Sarah (Whitman) Merrill.

He writes: "The record since 1872 is very brief. I have remained as city editor of the 'Daily Advertiser' since then; and since 1873 have acted as the regular news correspondent, at Boston, of the 'New York Tribune' and the 'Chicago Tribune.'"

FRANK DAVIS MILLETT.

Born in Bridgewater, Mass., November 3, 1846.

Son of Asa and Huldah A. (Byrum) Millett.

Occupation, an Artist. Residence, 1262 Calle San Domenico Castello, Venice, Italy.

He went from Boston, May 20, 1871, direct to Antwerp, where he remained till 1873, making, in the fall of 1872, a short journey to England. In March, 1873, was appointed Secretary of the Massachusetts Board of Commissioners to the Vienna Exposition, and received the commission on May 1, 1873. While on the commission at Vienna, he was elected one of the jurors — the youngest of all the jurors by at least ten years.

After the Vienna Exposition, he made a tour of three months through Switzerland, Transylvania, Italy, and also went as far east as the Black Sea: remained a month at Constantinople, and then took a trip through the Archipelago to Athens, Brindisi, and thence to Capri, where he remained during the summer of 1874 (the winter of 1873 was spent at Rome). From Capri he went to Venice, and reached there Aug. 3, 1874. There he took up his residence on the grand canal, and, with the exception of occasional trips to Florence and Ferrara, he has been there all the time since. When at Antwerp he received two prizes. He had been there six weeks, when the concours (annuals) came on, and went in to try his luck, little acquainted with German art or style of execution. Received as a result of his trial nine of the eleven (11) prizes, and the silver medal of the Royal Academy at Antwerp. Was crowned in public, by the king, in May, 1872. In the next concours, 1873, he received seven of the nine prizes, and the Academy gold medal. In this examination he was fortunate enough to secure prizes in those departments which he failed in the year before.

The Academy gold medal has as an accompaniment a sum of money sufficient to support the student one year in Rome; but as he was a foreigner this portion of the prize was deburred from him.

WILLIAM PEPPERELL MONTAGUE.

Born in Boston, June 8, 1848.

Buried at Salem, Mass., May 14, 1873.

At the meeting of the class on Commencement, June 25, 1873, the following tribute of respect, written by his most intimate college friend, was adopted:—

"It will ever be with a feeling of sadness to very many of us, that we meet as a class for our different anniversaries and reunions, and miss from our number the presence of him who but a few months ago was with us in all the freshness of health and strength, but whose early death we to-day mourn. Firmly attached to his alma mater, and ever happy in recalling the college days during which he had made so many sincere friends, in whose success and happiness he took the keenest interest; his loss will be felt by our university, by our class, and by each of us individually. We who saw him and were with him during his last long and distressing illness, who knew the pain he suffered, yet bore with true Christian fortitude and bravery, with a constant regard and thoughtfulness for those about him, and with never a murmur or complaint, but calmly, trustingly, awaiting the end which from the first he knew must come, find a most worthy example of unselfishness and heroism.

"Manly, true and noble in all his actions, a firm, devoted and affectionate friend, steadfast and conscientious in every principle of integrity and honor, a thorough gentleman in all his thoughts and deeds, — his memory will ever live in the hearts of those who knew and loved him while with us here, cherished and dear."

Wheeler's Exploring Expedition, going through a large part of Utah, Arizona, and Nevada; visited San Francisco and Santa Barbara, and returned to Washington, where I was engaged in working up the field-notes which I had collected as Meteorologist and Ethnologist: this, in connection with the War Department. In June, 1873, I resumed my place as assistant Librarian of Congress, remaining till March, 1874, when I came to Santa Barbara via Panama, mostly on account of my health, but largely to join my brother in sheep-raising. Rode many hundreds of miles looking for a sheep-ranch, and, not finding a suitable one, was induced (overpersuaded against my better judgment, for I was run down in health), to accept my present place in Jan., 1875, viz., the Presidency of Santa Barbara College, with about one hundred students, a Faculty of half-a-dozen professors, and a fine building. Cannot say how long I shall retain my present position.

"Am author of no separate work, but of half-a-dozen magazine articles: 'Spoons in a Wherry,' 'Checkmate to Apaches,' and 'Tom Haliburton's Quandary,' in 'Old and New' (latter in connection with a young lady in Washington society), and 'Thorpe, Cavalier,' in 'Overland.'"

GEORGE RUSSELL SHAW.

Born in Parkman, Me., October 28, 1848.

Son of Samuel P. and Hannah (Buck) Shaw.

December, 1870, began a trip to Europe as student of architecture. Stayed in London six months as a student of the School of Art at South Kensington. June, 1871, joined his family at Southampton on steamer, and with them made a trip up the Rhine and through Switzerland, reaching Munich in September, 1871, where, after a short trip through Germany, he entered the Polytechnic School, which he was obliged to leave in March, 1872, on account of ill-health. Travelled on the Continent until November, 1872, when he resumed the study of his profession in Paris, passing the examination of L'Ecole des Beaux Arts in the spring of 1874. October, 1874, returned to America and began as professional architect, January 1, 1875, at No. 4 Exchange Place, Boston. May, 1875, made a member of the Boston Society of Architects.

Was married, August 31, 1874, at the U. S. Legation at Paris, to Emily Mott, daughter of Thomas and Mariana Mott, of Philadelphia.

ROBERT GOULD SHAW.

WILLIAM ELIOT SPARKS.

Born in Cambridge, Mass., October 23, 1847.

Son of Jared and Mary C. (Silsbee) Sparks.

He writes : "In September, 1872, I entered the draughting-room of Wm. Mason, Esq., of Taunton, serving without pay for nearly a year for the sake of the information I thereby obtained pertaining to my profession as Mechanical Engineer and Machinist. I served a second year as a regular draughtsman, visiting several mills for a few weeks at a time during the summer of 1874, to obtain a more thorough knowledge of cotton machinery. In October, 1874, I became Ass't Sup't of the Mason Machine Works of this city (Taunton)."

Was married January 20, 1875, at Taunton, Mass., to H. A. Mason, daughter of William and H. A. Mason, of Taunton.

WILLIAM SCOLLAY WHITWELL.

Born in

Son of William S. and

He writes: "Leaving college, I entered the Harvard Medical School, where, in June, 1871, I received my degree of M. D., and later I was admitted, after examination, to the Massachusetts Medical Society.

"In July, 1871, I went to New York, and in September, passed the examination for Charity Hospital, Blackwell's Island, and for sixteen months served my time out in the respective institutions of the island.

"In February, 1873, I received the appointment of 3d assistant, under Dr. John P. Gray, in the New York State Lunatic Asylum, which position I resigned the following September, in order to go abroad.

"I sailed in October, and spent the winter in Vienna, the spring and summer in Breslau, Germany, and returned home in September, 1874.

"Having passed the examination, I received the appointment of House Surgeon for six months in the New York State Woman's Hospital.

"April 3, 1875, I sailed a second time for Europe, and am at present studying in Vienna.

"During my residence at Utica, N. Y., I was admitted to the Oneida Medical Society.

JOSEPH WOODWARD WILDER.

Born in Leominster, Mass., August 21, 1847.

Son of Charles W. and Laura S. (Kendall) Wilder.

He writes: "I am in the stove and hardware business, and have acted as selling agent for the 'Wilder Stove, Shelf and Machine Company;' and, in January last, went out for them to California, via Union and Central Pacific Railroad, returning in April, via Panama Isthmus.

"Am the Leominster correspondent of the 'Fitchburg Reveille,' a newspaper published weekly at Fitchburg, Mass."

GARDNER GOODRICH WILLARD.

AUGUSTUS EVERETT WILLSON.

Born in Maysville, Ky., October 13, 1846.

Son of Hiram and Ann C. (Ennis) Willson.

He writes: "I live at Louisville, Ky., and am a Lawyer; have been here at the same work ever since I left Cambridge. Was admitted to practise in the Supreme Court of the United States, on November 2, 1874. On June 6, 1874, Gen. John M. Harlan, in whose office I have been ever since I began to practise law, offered me a partnership, which I accepted. I consider this a generous reward for several years' hard work, and my best success so far.

"I have given all worth note, except the fact that I am very much delighted with my work."

WILLIAM SEAL WINDLE.

Born in Fairville, Pa., September 6, 1846.

Son of Caleb and Mary (Seal) Windle.

Engaged in practising law at West Chester, Pa.

FRANK WOODMAN.

Born in Mineral Point, Wisconsin Territory, September 26, 1846.

Son of Cyrus and Charlotte (Flint) Woodman.

July, 1872, went to Europe, where he remained until September, 1873; eight months of the time being passed in Paris, attending lectures at the Sorbonne and other schools. After his return, passed the winter and spring at Cambridge, Mass. The summer of 1874 was spent making examinations of lands in the West, principally Iowa and Wisconsin. In the autumn took the position of Division Engineer on the Chicago, Dubuque, and Minnesota Railroad, and was stationed eighty miles from Dubuque. The road stopped work in December, and he returned to Cambridge. Studied assaying at Institute of Technology, Boston, expecting to go to Colorado into a mining business, since given up; now thinks of going into business at Charleston, W. Virginia.

HORACE WINSLOW WRIGHT.

Born in Dorchester, Mass., June 21, 1848.

Son of Edmund and Sarah A. (Hunt) Wright.

He writes: "I have but a short story to tell. Nothing uncommon has occurred in my life during the three years, but it has flowed along very quietly, and, in a quiet way, with a measure of success. I am residing at Abington, doing the work of a minister for a society of the New Church existing there. This place has been more or less my home for eighteen months past. Previously to that I remained in Boston, preparing myself for the work in which I am now engaged. I am now about taking up my residence here (Abington). I was ordained into the ministry of the New Church, October 15, 1874, in this place."

GERALD WYMAN.

Born in Charlestown, Mass., May 4, 1847.

Son of William and Mary W. (Lapham) Wyman.

He writes: "For more than three years past have been in same business (with Messrs. Prince & Cotton, 52 Chatham street, Boston), but am now about severing my connection with the firm, and my further plans are not decided. Since 1873 have been one of the 'Board of Managers of the Charlestown Free Dispensary and Hospital,' and have been annually elected Secretary of both the Corporation and Board of Managers."

CHARLES LEE FOLLEN BRIDGE.

EDWARD LIVERMORE BURLINGAME.

Born in Cambridge, Mass., May 30, 1848.

Son of Anson and Jane C. (Livermore) Burlingame.

He writes: "I certainly have the least possible claim to be considered a member of the class of 1869, leaving it as I did when we had hardly begun to know each other; but your circular has reached me, and I am glad to contribute toward the making of a full report, by answering its questions as fully as may be. I am still living in New York, as at the date of your last report; occupation, editor and writer, I suppose (it is rather difficult to classify the general and various literary work that I am constantly at).

My journeys to China, etc., were all made before the date of your last triennial; the same with my law studies, etc. From January, 1871, to 1872, I was one of the editorial staff of the 'New York Tribune,' and left that occupation to become one of the editorial staff of the 'American Cyclopaedia,' at which I have ever since been at work, besides being engaged in various other literary matters. In 1869 I took the degree of Ph. D. at the University of Heidelberg; this constitutes my sole college honor. I have translated, or edited, several books, but I am not the author of any."

Was married July 12, 1871, at San Francisco, Cal., to Ella Frances Badger, daughter of William G. and Harriet Jane (Kinsley) Badger. July 9, 1872, a daughter, Jennie, was born. November 14, 1873, a son, Frederic Anson, was born.

FREDERICK LORD CHAPMAN.

Born in Cambridge, Mass., May 23, 1848.

Son of Francis L. and Lucy A. (Lord) Chapman.

He writes: "Being under the impression that I have never given you any account of myself since I dissolved my connection with the university, I will say that I left college, October 13, 1866, shortly after the beginning of the sophomore year. I was in the office of Messrs. E. & F. King & Co., 26 India street, Boston, from the latter part of the same month until July 16, 1870, when I entered the employ of Messrs. Pevear & Co., 85 Milk street, remaining with them until June 17, 1871, when I entered into business with my father, and have remained with him ever since. Our business is carriage manufacturing and repairing."

Was married in Philadelphia, November 13, 1873, to Ella Catherine Haupt, of that city, daughter of Gen. Herman and Ann C. (Keller) Haupt. October 8, 1874, a son, Herman Haupt, was born.

SAMUEL DINSMOOR.

Born in Keene, New Hampshire, August 29, 1848.

Son of Samuel and Anne E. (Jarvis) Dinsmoor.

He writes: "My residence is in Keene, New Hampshire. I have no occupation. Have been in Germany one year, and have made a trip around the world, starting from New York, September 4, 1871, and returning to New York by way of California, January 1, 1873."

FRANK LEWIS FABENS.

Born in Marblehead, Mass., September 19, 1846.

Son of William and Lucretia (Lewis) Fabens.

He writes: "After leaving Harvard, I bought a vessel, and went South, sailing between Florida and Cuba; remained there two winters, then sold my vessel, came home, and went to Gardiner, Maine, in the wholesale ice business. That was in 1869.

"In 1871, I went into the retail ice business in Washington, D. C. In 1873, exchanged my interest in Washington for my partner's interest in the wholesale at Gardiner, where at present I am located."

ALBERT ELLIOTT FLETCHER.

Born in

Son of

He writes: "I did not know that you desired to keep up a knowledge of those who did not graduate, but I am very glad to be remembered.

"Have resided in Indianapolis, engaged in banking business, which I began January 1, 1868. Sailed for Europe June 15, 1874, and returned October 16, 1874."

RICHARD THEODORE GREENER.

Born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, January 3, 1843.

Son of Richard W. and Mary A. (Thomas) Greener.

He writes: "I supposed I was off your books. I was just beginning to feel very loyal to '1870,' when your circular comes along reminding me very forcibly of my first love. A former member, one who I am afraid will never be thoroughly estranged from 1869, perhaps ought to say very briefly, that since 1872 he has taught in the Sumner High School, Washington, D. C.; was in the District Attorney's office in the same city, from August to October, 1873. Edited Frederick Douglass' paper, the 'New National Era,' from April, 1873, to October of same year. Was elected to my present professorship in the University of South Carolina, Columbia, South Carolina, October, 1873. Have written some political articles, and delivered an address on Senator Sumner since I have been here, but nothing worthy of preservation. Shall make this State my home.

"My chair is that of Mental and Moral Philosophy. I have also assisted in other departments.

"I am also a member of the law class of the University and expect to be graduated in a year."

Was married, September 24, 1874, to Genevieve Ida Fleet, of Washington, D. C., daughter of James H. and Hermione Constantia Fleet.

THOMAS LESLIE HINCKLEY.

Born in Milton, Mass., January 13, 1849.

Son of Thomas H. and Sally A. (Bent) Hinckley.

His present occupation is sheep-raising in Ventura County, California.

BENJAMIN HODGES.

Born in Salem, Mass., April 12, 1847.

Son of John and Mary (Osgood) Hodges.

His mother writes: "He left the class in the first year. In 1868, he went South to cultivate cotton, in which he is said to have been successful, and in which he is still engaged. He hires a plantation of three hundred acres, of an elderly widow, a most estimable person, and formerly wealthy. She boards him in her elegant southern home, making a happy home for him, and I judge, from the letters of both, that they are excellent friends. He talks of coming North in August."

WILLIAM HAMMATT HODGES.

Son of William R. and Susan C. (Dana) Lawrence.

He writes: "With regard to my doings since 1872, I continued at the Harvard Medical School from November 6, 1869, till June 25, 1873, at which latter date I received my degree. I at once commenced 'practice' in Brookline, and continued it about a year, during part of which time I had charge of one of the districts of the Boston Dispensary.

"On May 23, 1874, I sailed from New York, with my wife and children, to Bremen, and spent the summer in Germany, Switzerland and Austria. Reaching Vienna in the month of September, I have since then been studying and attending lectures at the General Hospital, and expect to pass two years or more in studying medicine abroad, after which I hope to practise in Boston, or vicinity."

Was married in Brookline, Mass., June 30, 1870, to Katharine Lawrence Cleaveland, daughter of Nehemiah Cleaveland, of Saugatuck, Conn. August 15, 1871, a daughter, Madeleine, was born. January 14, 1873, a daughter, Isabel, was born.

FRANCIS LAWTON.

Born in Newport, R. I., June 28, 1848.

Son of Francis and Isabella G. (Turner) Lawton.

He writes: "I am a lawyer, located at 170 Broadway, in the city of New York, and residing in Brooklyn. Supported myself while studying law in New York by journalistic work, and occupied the position of editor of the Weekly Tribune, in 1870. In May, 1871, journeyed West with the first party of emigrants that founded the irrigated town of Greeley, in the Great American Desert of Colorado, and returned, after a sojourn of four weeks on that sandy spot. In May, 1873, took a degree of LL. B. from Columbia Law School, and was admitted to the bar in June of the same year, since when I have been upholding the hands of justice in this city, and setting at naught the devices of the wicked. Still wander lonely along life's dreary pathway, and no olive-branches deck my lonesome dwelling, up to date."

FINANCIAL STATEMENT.

I herewith submit my financial accounts.

In brief, the total amount subscribed to the Class
Fund, as per last report, was	$5,070 00
Additional amounts subscribed to date,	80 00
	<hr/>
	$5,150 00
Amount paid in at date of last report,	$2,515 00
Additional amounts paid to date,	1,375 00
	<hr/>
	$3,890 00
Amount still due,	1,260 00
	<hr/>
	$5,150 00

The Class Fund now holds three $1,000 City of Boston six per cent. currency bonds, Nos. 1676, 1677, 1678, due January 1st, 1894. Interest payable Jan. and July.

These bonds were purchased by me, with the approval of a majority of the Class Committee. Price paid for same was $103\frac{7}{8}$ and interest. Present price offered at broker's board for same $105\frac{1}{2}$ and interest.

The balance of the Investment Account is in the hands of J. H. Beal, at 7 per cent. per annum.

In Triennial Report No. 1, the balance to credit of Investment Account is given as $2,647.07. This should have been $2,637.07 and is so carried forward in this report. The error arose as follows: Under date of June, 1872, the Class Fund is debited by amount paid Investment Account, $230; therefore the Investment Account should have been credited with like amount. The Investment Account, as printed, shows a credit of $240. Hence the error.

June 14. 1875.

Class 1869, Investment Account.

Cambridge, June 24, 1874, Commencement. Holworthy 9 was open for the class. Business meeting at 1.20.

The Class Committee reported that the Class Cup had been presented to H. F. Travis and thankfully acknowledged by him.

The accounts of the Class Secretary, having been examined by Mr. H. G. Pickering, in the absence of the Class Committee, were duly approved and accepted.

The following rule as to the use of the Class Fund was adopted:—

That the disbursements for any one year shall not exceed in amount the interest of the sum then paid in, and in the hands of the Treasurer; and in case the expenses for such years shall not equal in amount such interest, the surplus shall be added to the interest for the next and succeeding year or years; the whole to constitute a fund, distinct from the principal, to be applied to purposes of relief, and other necessary class expenditures.

That the amount of the appropriation for the relief of classmates in need, be in each case in the discretion of a committee, to consist of the Class Secretary and any two members of the Standing Class Committee.

The Class Secretary gave notice that the Second Triennial Supper would take place at Parker's, on the evening before Commencement, June 29, 1875.
